The resolution adopted by the English parliament to restore to the roster of its members the name of Charles Bradlaugh, is a tardy act of justice. Ten years ago this eminent statesman was refused his seat in parliament because of his alleged unbelief in religion. Who is to define the necessary religious beleif for a body composed of Catholics and Protestants, and at one time presided over by a Jew?

The latest crank suggestion for the World's Fair is a gigantic winter palace. Why is it that the average American still clings to royalty, or other aristocratic nonsense; returns to the weak and beggarly elements of the old order? The country is chock-full of all kinds of "Knights" who are really not knights at all; and every time we get up an exposition of any sort we clap a full-fledged palace on the grounds. Surely we are not so devoid of originality that we can't think of anything better than a palace, and a Russian Czar's palace at that for an American Exposition. If so, we had better shut up shop.

—A quartette of gentlemen (?) tourists who walk when they cannot steal a ride, came up from Amboy last evening and as the summer breezes that blew became more chilly they warmed themselves by doing Dement town and painting it red. After they had made an attempt to kick in the door at Louis Stephens place they were arrested. This morning before Justice Watts they gave their names as Frank Smith, Jeremiah Creig, Peter Clark and James Lawson, plead guilty to disorderly conduct and were sent to jail for lack of funds to pay a fine of five dollars and costs each, except as to Peter Clark, who paid ten.

—The report that King Seti I. would not last much longer THE TELEGRAPH is pleased to learn is pronounced by learned doctors of London to be unfounded. It is hoped that he will hold out for some time yet, as he has heretofore held out in about the present physical condition going on three thousand years it would be discouraging to have him mould away on account of a little mould caused by the damp weather of that damp country where he is now on exhibition. Seti is a mummy that was taken out of his winding sheets about four years ago and it was recently feared that the old stiff was limbering up in an unsatisfactory sort of a way.

—The reciprocity treaty between Brazil and the United States goes into effect on the first of April. It is a jug-handle agreement, with the handle on the American side, clearly showing that there is no Brazilian statesman sufficiently brilliant to cope with our Jim Blaine in a treaty. The peculiar feature of the arrangement is the fact that the United States does not really make any sacrifices for the privilege of having a decided advantage over other nations in the admission of our products free to the Brazilian markets. To one who can understand that it is largely the producer instead of the consumer who pays the tarriff, this advantage will appear very apparent. For this favor our country actually pays nothing. The articles which the United States admits free of duty from Brazil are not in the tariff bill and indeed have been for a long time admitted free; while Brazil has heretofore had a high tariff on wheat, flour, corn, and other products that we wish to sell in that country. There is nothing in this principle of reciprocity that in the least interferes with a sensible view of the doctrine of protection.

OUR CITY ELECTION.

It hath gone abroad in the land through some channel not known in the usually well informed branches of this office that THE TELEGRAPH is some sort of a mind reader, and can prognosticate as to coming events, even that of probable results of a canvass for mayors and aldermen to be elected next week. This appears to us from the fact that the writer hereof is solicited at various and sundry times of the day and in all parts of the city to tell anxious citizens for a certainty who are to be candidates for mayor and who are to stand for aldermanic honors in this or that ward and who will be elected and how about the charter business; will it carry or are the people "agin" it? There are some things that we do know but on all these questions we have not as yet cast our self-acting horoscope. In fact our horoscope has not sufficient scope for local political signs and wonders, and, furthermore the local political sky has been too cloudy for our astrologer to run down all indications that he has taken from his particular perigeum when last at the city council rooms. We may, however, make this suggestion: That the Augurs have been for several days flying their chickens in hope of solving the vexed question but the birds have not so far conducted themselves to the liking of the anxious politicians. This charter business has mixed things somewhat and the stirring process is still going on. The gas and electric

SENATE ECONOMY.

No Big Salaries for World's Fair Officials.

HEAVY CUT IN THE APPROPRIATION.

Trade Dollars To Be Recoined—The House Passes the Direct Tax Bill—Mrs. Lathrop's Speech to the Woman's National Council—King Alcohol's Power, as the W. C. T. U. Oratress Sees It—Death of Senator Wilson, of Maryland—Official Notes from the Capital.

WASHINGTON CITY, Feb. 25.—The senate had before it yesterday the items of the sundry civil bill appropriating for the World's fair. The senate committee's amendment striking out the $50,000 for the Latin-American department was agreed to. The amendment was also adopted reducing the salaries for the president of the commission, president of the board of lady managers, clerks, stenographers, typewriters, office rent, printing, stationery, and every expenditure of money for said commission, including the board of lady managers, to a sum not exceeding $33,000, for the balance of the current fiscal year, and fixing the amount for the total expense per year at $40,000. Farwell offered an amendment increasing this amount to $120,000 per year for all official salaries and expenses of the commission, but the amendment was lost.

Some Information from Allison.

During the debate McPherson referred to the large salaries which the officers of the exposition had voted to themselves and inquired whether the committee on appropriations had taken any position on the subject. Allison replied that under the act organizing the exposition $200,000 had been appropriated for the use of the commission, and that the commissioners had gone on in the expenditure of that money for the current fiscal year. The committee had reported an amendment for a limited appropriation during the next fiscal year, and in order to make the plan proposed for those officers next year apply to the remainder of the present fiscal year, it was necessary to agree to that amendment. It was intended that the machinery of the exposition at Chicago should speedily adjust itself to the proposed conditions.

Those Commission Salaries.

McPherson asked what those conditions were. It had been charged that the officers had voted themselves large salaries, and that they had thus exhausted the appropriation made last year. There was very great fear expressed in some quarters that if that thing were allowed to go on and to continue during the preparations for the exposition there would be very little left of the appropriation of $1,500,000 to be devoted to any purpose other than the payment of salaries. Allison said that it was not intended to continue the present plan and arrangement. It was expected that, whatever the official staff or management might be in Chicago, the great body of their compensation would be paid out of the fund raised for the exposition by voluntary contributions, or by the gate receipts.

More Silver To Be Coined.

Plumb offered an amendment to the bill, which was agreed to, adding thereto a proviso requiring the secretary of the treasury to coin into standard silver dollars the trade dollar bullion and the trade dollars now in the treasury, the expense thereof to be charged to the silver profit fund. The paragraph authorizing the use of unexpended balances for the prevention of epidemics gave rise to a long discussion. Chandler moved to place further sums at the disposal of the president for the same purpose—the whole amount of the expenditure for the year not to exceed $250,000. In an impassioned speech Gorman denounced Chandler's proposition as an atrocious one, as giving the president an unlimited use of money, and as more dangerous to the people than an epidemic of cholera, yellow fever, or small-pox would be, but Chandler's motion was agreed to.

The Direct Tax Bill Again.

The house put in its time yesterday principally on the direct tax bill. The only amendment agreed to was one providing that no money shall be paid to any state until it shall have, through resolution of its legislature, accepted the sum appropriated as full satisfaction for all claims against the United States on account of the collection of the tax. There was Democratic opposition to consideration of the bill because, as alleged, the time allowed for debate was too short. McKinley replied to this that no measure had ever received a more thorough discussion than this bill. Oates, Cummings, Spinola, Springer and other Democrats made constitutional arguments against the bill.

A Matter of Justice.

Grosvenor favored the measure. The question presented was whether the government would do justice in one way or the other—either by compelling the defaulting states to pay their quota or to refund to the states which had paid the tax the amount levied and collected from them. There were also claims by the opponents that the Republicans were going to bankrupt the government so that when the Democrats came into power they could not reduce taxes, but would have to increase them. Those advocating the bill pooh-pooed this, and said the treasury was well able to pay the money. When the vote was finally taken the bill passed by 172 years to 101 nays.

THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION.

As Viewed by One of the Speakers at the Woman's Council.

WASHINGTON CITY, Feb. 25.—A number of papers were read and speeches delivered at the Woman's National Council yesterday, the most notable probably being that of Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop. She said of the National Temperance union that, cursed at the bar of the legalized saloon; hissed on the floor of the beer brewers' congress; scorned by conventions of political parties; misrepresented by the all-powerful press; denied its ultimate prayer in the halls of legislation; sneered at in the palaces of fashion, where the wine-glass tempts to destroy; criticised by conservative pulpits, and unwelcome often even in the Christian church, it has been left to this organization of ballotless women to arouse all classes of opposers and find for themselves the "hate of hate."

Some Blessings Enumerated.

Then, on the other hand—blessed by the feverish lips of the drunkard ready to perish; sought by the wandering feet of the boy or girl who went astray; hallowed by loving thought at thousands of firesides; baptized with holy tears by the mothers whose battle it wages; perfumed by the stainless prayers of the little children; indorsed by the expressed principles of organized Christianity; sustained by the highest and freshest authorities in the scientific world; praised by lips grown careful through statesmanlike speech; believed in by the best, trusted by the most needy, it has been granted them also to find the "love of love."

"Climbed the Throne of Revenue."

When the civil war broke out money grew plenty and moved rapidly, blood was hot, society disorganized, and opened to the flower of a nation's manhood the doors of recklessness and self-indulgence. What wonder then, she asked, that appetite often conquered the conqueror, until at the very feasts where victories were celebrated there stood with muffled face another problem. Before the war was finished, she said, the government seized upon the commodity of the saloon and drunkard; figured its percentage on the gains from the vices of the people, and in 1863 the liquor traffic climbed the throne of revenue.

Power of King Alcohol.

Ever since that day this cruel, vicious, and un-American power has held in its hand at once a sceptre and a lash. For those who bow to its demands and do its bidding, the extended sceptre of money, preferment and power; for those who hesitate or resist, the lash of its scorpion-like vengeance. During its legalized elevation it has whipped political parties like spaniels to its feet; scourged good men out of their places, from the United States senate down; driven official representatives in other nations to act as drummers for the commerce of rum; cowed some pulpits and the majority of the Christian manhood of the country into silence or subserviency; cracked its whip over the press, legislative halls, and an outraged ballot-box, until to-day it is the tyrant of our civilization.

A Warning to the Statesmen.

She held that the government, the party and the voter were all in an agreement and were responsible for this condition of affairs. The saloon was allowed to perpetuate itself; the government to get the revenue; the party to get the government; the politician to secure the spoils of office, and the voter to shout on the winning side. In conclusion, she paused at the threshold of the great discussion concerning the political attitude of this organization: "but here, within sight of the white shrine of the Capitol dome, I say solemnly: God dealt once with this nation for the sin of enslaving the bodies of men, and the scars of that smiting are yet upon us; how much more shall He come from the hidings of his power when our sin is the enslaving of souls."

DEATH OF A SENATOR.

Wilson of Maryland Suddenly Taken by Heart Disease.

WASHINGTON CITY, Feb. 25.—Senator E. K. Wilson, of Maryland, died here last night at 10:05 at his apartments at the Hamilton house, of heart disease, in his 70th year. Mr. Wilson was in his seat in the senate chamber last Saturday apparently in good health, and the news of his death came as a shock to the community. He complained on Sunday and Monday, but his condition was not regarded as serious until late Monday night, when he had a sinking spell. He revived and yesterday morning was thought to be out of danger. Later in the day he grew worse and hovered between life and death until about 10 o'clock, when the end came.

The Congressional Summary.

WASHINGTON CITY, Feb. 25.—In the senate yesterday the sundry civil appropriation bill was considered and several amendments adopted, and then Cameron presented resolutions of sorrow at the death of the late Representative Watson, of Pennsylvania. Eulogies were delivered and the senate, as a further mark of respect, adjourned.

The house, after routine business, took up the direct tax bill and after a long discussion, it was amended, passed, and a conference committee appointed. The conference report on the naval appropriation bill was agreed to, and the house adjourned.

A PERFECT MAN PHYSICALLY.

Remarkable Muscular Development of Daniel H. Hogan.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—The board whose duty it is to examine applicants for the police force has found a man whom it declares to be perfect in physical development. He is Daniel H. Hogan, a pier foreman, 30 years old, and born in Fonda, Montgomery county, this state. Hogan is 5 feet 8 inches high, and weighs, stripped, 158 pounds. On the lifting machine, with his back he pulled up 660 pounds, and with his legs 1,188; strength of forearm, measuring 13¼ inches, 330 pounds; of upper arm, measuring 15½ inches, 550 pounds; capacity of lungs, 300 cubic inches; strength of contractor muscles, 165 pounds; of pectoral muscles, 191 pounds; adductor muscles, knee pressure in squeezing, 286 pounds.

Feats with the Dumbbells.

All of these measurements are far above the average. In both the agility test, including jumping, rope climbing and horizontal and parallel bar exercise, and in the condition and health of the muscles and system, Hogan ranked 100, or perfect. With the right arm he put up a dumbbell weighing seventy-five pounds and with the left one of sixty pounds. He has still to have his mind examined, and should he do as well in that as he has in the examination just passed he will head the list of applicants.

Marshall Field's Tariff Bill Case.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—In the case brought by Marshall Field & Co. to test the legality of the United States revenue law, Judge Blodgett yesterday decided in favor of the government. The case will be taken to the supreme court. The judge simply affirmed the decision of the appraisers, and the decision was short. He said that he was much impressed by the arguments o the attorneys for the appellant, but it was not the policy of his court to interfere with the present tariff rates, owing to the trouble it would cause. Moreover the supreme court was the place where final decision must be made, and he would allow an appeal. The appeal will be taken immediately.

A "Slump" in the Temperature.

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 25.—A cold wave from the northwest arrived here at noon yesterday, and before evening sent the thermometer down from 70 degrees to 15 degrees above zero, a fall of 55 degrees.

The horse ridden by Mrs. J. W. Jones, wife of a farmer living near Carrollton, Ark, ran away Monday, throwing the woman and dragging her half a mile by the stirrup. She was dead when picked up.

THINK HE IS DAFT.

Sensational Time in Connecticut's Legislature.

THE CHANDLER-GALLINGER BROIL.

Reply to Charges Against the Senator-Elect by the Senator's Newspaper—Republican Members Want to Know If the Senator Is Not Insane—The Illinois "Big Three" Threatened — Michigan Republicans Relax Vigilance and "Get Badly Left."

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 25.—Nearly the entire afternooon in the house yesterday was occupied by United States Senator-Elect Gallinger, of Concord, and H. W. Green, of Hopkinton, in replying, under a question of personal privilege, to the allegations made by United States Senator Chandler, in an editorial in the columns of the paper, The Concord Monitor, that these gentlemen and other Republicans had entered into a series of bargains with Hon. Frank Jones, Hon. C. A. Sinclaire, and other influential Democrats, inimical to the Republicans of the state. Each gentleman replied at length, denying plainly and unequivocally every one of the allegations.

Applied Epithets to Chandler.

Mr. Green at times became very animated, and during these periods he applied the epithets "cur," "coward," and "assassin of character" to Senator Chandler. Mr. Gallinger appealed to Mr. Sulloway, of Manchester, to state whether Mr. Chandler's allegations were true, that he (Gallinger) was responsible for the attacks made upon him (Chandler) in the Republican senatorial caucus of 1888. Sulloway, who was then a member, said that Mr. Gallinger was not responsible, and Senator Chandler was an unmitigated liar.

Is It Malice or Mania?

Pillsbury, of Derry (Rep.), offered the following: "Resolved, That this house has read with unmeasurable surprise in the columns of a newspaper of extensive circulation, whose chief owner is Hon. William E. Chandler, senator of the United States from this commonwealth, charges of the most offensive character against certain prominent members of this body who have been especially honored by us and by the people of the state; charges which, if true, would inflict a lasting disgrace upon this body, irrespective of party, and leave a stain upon the fair name of our state. We therefore feel called upon to characterize the utterances of said paper of the 16th inst., above referred to, as either the inventions of malice or the maniacal ravings of one whose reason seems to be dethroned. It is therefore the sense of this house that Senator Chandler ought to tender to this legislature either an apology or a full retraction of the charges."

The Resolution Tabled.

Angell, Rep., of Derry said: "Before this resolution is submitted I should like to know whether William E. Chandler is sick, insane, or diseased. I judge from what has been said this afternoon that he is insane, and if he is, why notice these things?" On motion of Lyman of Exeter, the resolution was tabled. During these extraordinary proceedings the galleries and lobbies of the house were thronged with spectators.

THE ILLINOIS MONOTONY.

No Action in Joint Session—Doings in the Two Houses.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., Feb. 25.—More flag petitions were presented in the senate yesterday. Mahony introduced a bill, aimed at the United Order of Deputies, making it a conspiracy for two or more persons to agree to prevent the election of any person to office on account of his religious belief. Other bills: Amending the eminent domain act so that petitioners shall pay the costs of suits instead of the counties; submitting to popular vote the question of poll-tax; allowing all registered physicians to practice as pharmacists. All the governor's appointments for the past two years were confirmed.

Early Sessions in the House.

Bills were introduced in the house: Authorizing corporations, not for profit, to care for children abandoned, neglected, or subject to perverted training; to tax telegraph companies $1 per mile for a single wire, and 20 cents additional for each other wire strung on the same pole. Headon moved that the house hereafter meet at 10:05. Dixon movedthat the hour be 11:30. The last failed for want of a quorum. Then a motion to adjourn was made and carried, and Speaker Crafts declared the house adjourned to 10 a. m. to-day.

The "Big Three" Threatened.

The joint session was a farce. Only one vote was cast—Speaker Crafts, who voted for Palmer. The trouble was that there were several absentees, and nobody else would vote.

There was a good deal of excitement last night when it was stated by Cockrell and Taubeneck that they had received guarded warnings that a conspiracy existed to "do them up" if they did not bring the senatorial fight to a close pretty quick. Both gentleman said they had been warned not to go out after nightfall.

Against the "Impersonal" Idea.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 25. — Senator Hompe yesterday introduced a bill in the legislature requiring that to every article published in any newspaper relating to any public man there shall be attached the signature of the author of the article.

REPUBLICANS CAUGHT NAPPING.

Michigan Democrats Unseat Two Senators and Get a Majority.

LANSING, Mich., Feb. 25.—The three Independent senators who were elected last fall have held the balance of power in the senate all winter. Yesterday by an adroit flank movement on the part of the Democrats, the three were toppled headlong from their commanding position and the Democrats have a clean majority. The senate has had two contested election cases on hand for some time, Democratic contestants laying claim to the seats of Horton and Morse, both Republicans. The committees held back their reports because it was clearly understood that the three Independents would not vote to seat the contestants, their votes being necessary.

Lapsed in Their Vigilance.

Yesterday several Republican senators attended the state convention at Jackson and the Democrats seized the opportunity. The committee's reports unseating Horton and Morse were presented and adopted, and James H. Morrow and Charles Fredlinder were declared elected in their places, thus giving the Democrats a clear majority. All the Republican senators have been wired to return at once, and an attempt will be made to overthrow the action.

Legislation in Wisconsin.

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 25.—The senate killed a bill providing for the punishment by death of convicts under life sentence who commit murder while in prison. The house rejected the bill permitting only registered pharmacists to sell patent medicines. Assembly bills were passed authorizing the governor to fill vacancies by appointment when state offices become vacant; to repeal the law of 1887 regulating the practice of veterinary surgery. The bill making interest on judgments the same as on mortgages was recommitted.

Hill Doesn't Recognize Bulkely.

WATERBURY, Conn., Feb. 25 — officer Dodds went to Albany Monday with a requisition signed by Governor Bulkely asking for the extradition of Charles Fardon, now held in New York and wanted for robbing a store in this city. Dodds called on Governor Hill yesterday, and telegraphed to Chief Egan, of this city, that the governor refuses to recognize Bulkely as governor of Connecticut, and would not grant the requisition.

THE COLUMBUS, O., TRAGEDY.

The Evidence All Against the Elliott Brothers—Osborne's Premonition.

COLUMBUS, O, Feb. 25—The awful tragedy of Monday, in which W. L. Hughes and Al C. Osborne lost their lives and five men were wounded, is the sole topic of conversation on the streets, in the hotel lobbies, and in the saloons here. Osborne seemed to have a premonition of his impending fate. Monday morning he was down town, armed, and watchful. He was also very nervous, and would start and glance over his shoulder at any unusual sound. A young man named J. W. Lincoln, who was an intimate friend of Al Osborne, says that the deceased had momentarily expected death, and had made a final disposition of his possessions. Only last week he had made his will, and had spoken to this young man as to how he wished his remains cared for. "For," said he, when reproved for his levity, "I expect trouble with the Elliotts if we meet, though I cannot say just what kind."

Arranged for His Funeral.

He ordered that this young man take his body from the coroner, as soon as through with it, and have it placed in charge of Tom Doonan, the undertaker—who by the way was Osborne's friend and until a year ago foreman on The Capital. He further desired that his body be taken to the home of his sister, Mrs. Mason, and that later it be given interment at Reynoldsburg. This conversation between Lincoln and Osborne took place last week. They again met Monday noon near Schrader's saloon, just after Osborne had been weighed on the scales and measured. Lincoln addressed him as follows: "Al, I guess we had better put that casket, which we had received for you, back in its place, for you don't seem to need it." Osborne immediately answered: "This is straight goods and no joking. The day is not over, and I may need the coffin before night." With that the two parted.

The Elliotts Did All the Killing.

At 10 o'clock a. m. yesterday the coroner, with Drs. Frank Warner, E. F. Wilson and J. F. Baldwin, began a post-mortem examination upon the bodies of Editor Osborne and Mr. Hughes. It was shown that the bullet Osborne received in the head was from the revolver used by W. J. Elliott and the one through his lungs from the revolver of his brother Patrick. It was also shown that the bullet which killed Mr. Hughes was from W. J. Elliott's revolver. Clarence Reed, a young man living near Elliott's home at Arlington, says that Elliott was practicing with his pistol Monday morning. He saw him, he says, shooting at a target. At the conclusion of the practice he got into his buggy and drove toward the city.

Proof Before the Coroner.

At the coroner's inquest the testimony was all against the Elliott brothers. The witnesses swore that W. J. Elliott fired first upon Osborne, who stood with his hands in his pockets less than ten feet away, and that the first shot took effect in Osborne's chin. It was further testified that W. J. Elliott took refuge behind a woman and fired over her shoulder, and that at this juncture Hughes dropped dead. Osborne in the meantime retreated to the hat store, followed by Pat, where he received his death-wound in the heart. Ed Osborne, mayor of Reynoldsburg, brother of the deceased, has filed an affidavit against the Elliott brothers, charging them with murder, and will push the prosecution.

The Monon Litigation.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—The attorneys for the "Monon" road petitioned, Judge Collins yesterday to delay the proceedings before Master in Chancery Boyeson and dissolve the order issued from Judge Tuley's court commanding President Breyfogle and others to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed for the corporation if, as is alleged, the road is in an insolvent condition. Judge Collins ordered a stay of proceedings until the defendant could file a bill in answer.

Disastrous Wreck on the Reading.

ASHLAND, Pa., Feb. 25.—A disastrous wreck occurred on the Reading road near Gordon station at 6:30 last evening, completely demolishing five oil tanks, four freight cars and four powerful enginas. Owing to a train breaking in two and the consequent delay, a freight train collided with the engines. The wreck took fire and exploded the oil tanks, and in a short time the loss to the company was $150,000. No one was seriously hurt.

Alleged Find of Silver.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Feb. 25.—Robert Grayson and Charles McComb discovered a heavy vein of silver on Grayson's farm on Silver creek, Clark county, Tuesday. Ore assayed of the same kind at Chicago some time ago gave a large per cent. of the precious metal. The alleged find creates much excitement.

Pulmonary Trouble.

It is a scientific fact that the valley of the Mississippi, thought to be a certain cure for consumption, is becoming the seat of pulmonary disease; but why this should be so science has not yet determined, but deaths from colds, consumption, croup, bronchitis, and the like are increasing year by year. It therefore behooves every one to look carefully after his health and to check the first symptoms of pulmonory trouble. If neglected the consequences are likely to be much more serious than they were a few years ago. In all cases of exposure to a rapidly changing temperature, when caught by the rain or in the blizzard, take a dose of REID'S GERMAN COUGH AND KIDNEY CURE at once. It is certain that its results will ward off the worst cold and save the patient from a fit of sickness that otherwise might be fatal. It contains no poison so that a dose that in other medicines would be dangerous, in REIDS GERMAN COUGH AND KIDNEY CURE can be taken not only with impunity but with beneficial results. THE RESCUED FIVE.

Some Further Particulars of the Jeanesville Miracle.

CONDITION OF THE UNFORTUNATES.

Four of Them Gaining Strength, But One Seemingly Weaker—Interesting Facts About the Condition of the Mine After the Disaster—A Fearful Air Pressure for Men to Live in—How Four Others Lost Their Lives by Building a Fire—How the Men Were Found.

JEANESVILLE, Pa., Feb. 25.—"Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow" was sung as it was never sung before at 2 o'clock yesterday morning by a company blackened miners who had just issued from the mouth of the Jeanesville mine with the most marvelous story the bowels of the earth ever gave forth. They sang the glad tidings of a resurrection, for never did men look upon a miracle more strange than seemed the rescue of comrades many days mourned as dead. The records of human endurance contain nothing that can match the experience of the five men now being tenderly nursed back to life and strength.

Five Pitiful Human Wrecks.

They are five pitiful wrecks of human beings as they lay stretched upon improvised beds in the town hall, which has been turned into a hospital, but they still live, and the medical men, who do not cease to marvel over the fact that life is still in them, say that they will soon be able to tell as well as words can the story of their sufferings. For nineteen days and eight hours these five men were entombed, practically without food or drink, 600 feet deep and three-quarters of a mile from the mouth of the mine, in a hole three feet wide and three high. For air to breathe they had only what was imprisoned with them, and that under the pressure of an immense weight of water given the force of four atmospheres.

The Story of Disaster Retold.

The disaster which overtook them and a score or more of their comrades occurred at 11 o'clock on the morning of the 4th inst. There was a sudden rush of water into the mine from a long abandoned shaft. Nobody knows the cause. It is conjectured that the workers had gone nearer the abandoned mine than was suspected and that a miner's pick had pierced the barrier and started the flood. At all events, the waters poured in with a sudden deluge, which in five minutes, had filled more than 200 feet vertically above of the lower levels of the mine. All the men in that drift and its branches got warning in time and escaped to the bottom of the slope and up in the car.

The Flight for Safety.

But the miners in the opposite drift were cut off and could only retreat before the advancing flood higher into the labyrinth. The waters followed them up until the main drift was entirely filled. It was into the little drifts, the highest points in the depths of the mine that such miners as were not caught by the flood and whose escape by the shaft was cut off immediately fled. The water in the mine mounted so high that in the main shaft it reached fully seventy feet above that of the imprisoned men. Their prison was of course air tight. The air confined there prevented the invasion of the flood to the very end of the pockets where the men took refuge, and mining engineers say the head of water was sufficient to quadruple the normal atmospheric pressure.

Work of Clearing the Mine.

When the situation was fully understood by the managers of the mine it was at once considered impossible that any one below could have remained alive beyond a few brief hours at most. Nevertheless, the work of clearing the mine was undertaken with as much energy as though the lives of all the missing men, eighteen in number, depended upon it. When men could enter the mine several bodies were found, all drowned, and it was concluded that all had died in the same manner. Such was the general conviction until Sunday, when penetrating still farther the explorers found the bodies of four men who had not apparently been very long dead.

Their Fatal Bad Judgment.

As it proved, these four had a better chance of surviving than the five who were rescued Monday night. Their own bad judgment cost them their lives. They had built a fire of boards and splinters. The fire consumed what remained of oxygen in the air, and the four men perished after several days of hunger of asphyxiation. Their fate is peculiarly distressing because their supply of air in volume and quantity of oxygen was considerably larger than that of the five men still living. On Monday four more bodies were found, but they had perished by drowning. Only five more of the eighteen missing remained to be accounted for, and only two or three of the most distant points remained to be visited.

Rescue of the Missing Five.

And Monday nights brought rescue to these. They had crawled into a heading or passage which had been partially excavated from breast 5 to breast 4. How to get them out was a problem. The only way was for a miner to lie upon his back, take one of the sufferers in his arms and slide over the rough path to the bottom. This was done, and yesterday morning the remainder of the journey was accomplished, and the sufferers once more breathed the free air of the outside. The rescued men were resting quietly last evening. The pulse of all but Joe Mustuskowitch had improved. He appeared to be growing weaker.

Details of Their Delivery.

Foremen Hale and Ketcham and Superintendent McFarlane were the men who found the imprisoned miners. Their attention was attracted to a muffled sound and they listened intently and finally heard a faint murmur that sounded like a human voice. McFarlane gave a long hail. There came back a feeble, faint but distinct "Hello!" The three men pressed forward into the very black damp itself until their lamps went out. McFarlane once again called out: "Keep heart, lads, I am coming." Back came the trembling voice: "We know, big boss." Then there was no doubt about it. "Big Boss" McFarlane, as he is known among the miners, dashed back to the picket line to pass the word for brandy, restoratives and medical aid. Then he rejoined his two companions, and, regardless of black damp, they pushed ahead in utter darkness to the breast, bringing life to the perishing.

The nomination of Charles Foster as the successor of Secretary Windom was confirmed by the United States senate Tuesday.

CYCLONE ON THE OHIO.

No Lives Reported Lost, but a Number of Buildings Wrecked.

SEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., Feb. 25.—A cyclone swept up the north bank of the Ohio river late last night. It course was northeastward, barely missing Jeffersonville. A telephone message from Utica, Ind., a little town eight miles above Jeffersonville, says that place received the full force of the tornado. The town hall, a one-story brick building, was utterly demolished and ten residences blown down. A number of people were bruised and injured, but none is yet known to have been killed. The houses of the town are all one story, which accounts for the absence of loss of life.

The Mitchell-LaBlanche Fight.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Feb. 25.—The failure of the California Athletic club Monday night to reach any decision in the Mitchell-LaBlanche matter caused great disgust among local sports. No evidence was received which showed any collusion between the two men, but it was clearly proved that LaBlanche was drunk when he entered the ring. This LaBlanche denies, but says he took two drinks just before the fight. A decision is looked for next Tuesday.

THE CURSE OF SCOTLAND.

There Are Twenty-four Reasons Why the Nine of Diamonds Is Called Unlucky.

Every reader has at some period of his or her life heard of the nine of diamonds referred to as "the curse of Scotland;" but why, perhaps, you have never taken the time or trouble to ascertain.

In my "Repository of the Rare and the Wonderful" I find no less than seventeen explanations of the origin of the expression, while Southwick's "Quizzism and Its Key" gives eleven, seven of which are wholly different from the answers given in the work above referred to, making in all twenty-four different accounts of the origin of the expression in the two works. Southwick traces it back to 1745, mentioning a caricature of that date which represents "the young chevalier" attempting to lead a herd of bulls laden with papal curses across the Tweed river with the nine of diamonds lying before them.

Perhaps the most satisfactory explanation of the enigma is that which refers it to the massacre of Glencoe. The order for that cruel deed was signed by the Earl of Stair, John Dalrymple, secretary of state for Scotland. The coat of arms of the Dalrymple family bears nine lozenges, resembling diamonds, on its shield. Thus it appears to have been with reference to them that the nine spot of diamonds was called "the curse of Scotland." The best and most likely of the other reasons for the origin of the expression are given below.

During the reign of Mary a thief attempted to steal the crown from Elizabeth castle, and succeeded in abstracting nine valuable diamonds from it. To replace these a heavy tax was laid on the people of Scotland, which impoverished them to such an extent that nine diamonds, whether on cloth, cards or real jewels, were spoken of as "Albion's curse."

In the game of Pope Joan the nine of diamonds is the pope, whom the Scotch Presbyterians consider a curse.

It is also said that the Duke of Cumberland wrote his inhuman orders at Culloden on the back of a card, the front of which was marked with nine diamonds.

The "Oracle, or Resolver of Questions," printed in 1770, says that the crown of Scotland had but nine diamonds, and that the Scotch people were too poor to add to the collection.—St. Louis Republic.

An Elevator Incident.

In one of the elevators in a down town building the other day an absent minded man came near departing this life with unbecoming haste. He had stood close by the door when the car stopped at his floor and had allowed two or three other passengers to brush by him. He had made no signs of a desire to step out, but when the elevator resumed its upward course and the door was nearly closed he gave a start and jumped forward until his body projected out of the car and prevented the door from closing. Luckily the conductor understood his business. With an instinctive movement he stopped the car in a few inches. Then he drew back the door and released the venturesome passenger, who walked away without even looking back or saying a word. The other passengers looked on in silence.

Even the elevator man had nothing to say for a minute, but when the next floor was reached the whole affair seemed to strike him in a new light. He didn't think of the horror of a life suddenly taken away, of the sickening sight of a crushed and mangled body. "That's what I call a mean man," quoth he with severity. "Want to have me sent to the Tombs, eh? Gad! A man like that ought to get hurt, he had."—New York Times.

Noble Tree Planters.

I read a very interesting statement recently that the three late dukes of Athole planted in their lifetime 14,000,000 larch trees on their estates. The writer who made this statement seemed to doubt the fact on the ground that he imagined that their graces did so with their own hands, which would necessitate each of them planting 200 trees a day for sixty years. When, however, a man is said to "plant" an estate it does not any more mean that he does so personally than, when it is said that a man "furnishes" a house, he makes his own cabinets and tables, or puts down his own carpets—though our grandfathers and grandmothers, as often as not, actually did the latter, as well as—good souls!—sewing the various strips of carpets together.

If, however, it comes to planting trees with one's own hands, there is still something to be said. Charles II planted nearly all the trees in the avenue at Windsor with his, and some that are now in St. James' park; and George III had a mania for planting his own trees, as well as innumerable grape vines. Her present majesty has planted over 5,000 trees in various places she has visited, and the Prince of Wales cannot be very far behind her in also doing so.—Galignani's Messenger.

A Terrapin Farm.

Of late years a number of terrapin farms have been started along the Chesapeake. The biggest farm is on the Patuxent river, and it consists of a large salt water lake, which could accommodate thousands of terrapin if they would breed as rapidly as is desired. The farmer has surrounded this lake with board fences to keep out the muskrats and foxes, which are the terrapin's enemies. He has made hatcheries of boxes partly filled with sand, and so arranged that when the females enter them they cannot get out until they are taken out. He has nurseries for young terrapin, and he keeps the little ones in here until they are ten months old, in order to preserve them from their fathers.—Frank G. Carpenter in Pittsburg Dispatch.

Paying the Piper.

Inquiring Boy (looking up from a book)—What does "paying the piper" mean?

Worried Father (absently)—Tell him to call next week.

"I said 'the piper,' pa."

"Well, if it's a plumber, he needn't call for a month."—Good News.

FLOWERS BRING MONEY.

HERE IS AN INDUSTRY WORTH WHILE FOR WOMEN TO PURSUE.

A Young Washington Woman Tells About Her Success in Cultivating Roses and Violets—They Require Little Labor and Bring Large Returns.

"Flower culture in a small way can be made to pay even by an amateur who chooses to pursue it in a painstaking and intelligent way," said a young woman. "Five years ago I bought a little farm near Anacostia, called it 'Rose Acres,' and started in merely for amusement's sake with a few rose bushes and some other plants. I love flowers dearly, and the labor I expended upon them was well repaid by the pleasure of it, but after a while I found that it would produce money also. So I planted more and more, until at present I have between three and four thousand rose bushes of the choicest varieties. A skilled gardener told me the other day that my collection of hybrid perpetuals is probably the finest in this country. On the day before Decoration Day I picked and sold 5,000 roses from my own place.

"I am extravagantly fond of roses, but violets are more profitable. On the day before Christmas I picked and sold 3,200 violets at two cents apiece; that is $64 worth. They were worth the highest price then, but they never bring less than one cent apiece. To raise them is quite easy. I have 320 glass sashes under which the violets bloom all winter long. In May I have a lot of fresh ground plowed and prepared, and in it I plant all my violets, taken from beneath the sashes for the purpose. Then I simply take up the sashes and cover the newly planted violets with them and the work is done. In October they begin to bloom, and continue all through the winter, so that I can pick them every day and send the flowers to market.

ALWAYS A MARKET.

"All of my violet plants come from one little pot that I bought at the Center market five years ago. They are made to multiply by dividing the roots, so that a single plant taken up in the spring will supply a score or more. I sell my flowers by sending them to the florists in Washington or very often in New York. Prices are higher in New York, so that it usually pays to express them on.

"There is always a market for flowers and there is never any difficulty in disposing of them. Any florist is glad to buy them if they are good ones and in prime condition. Those which I send to New York are delivered early the next morning. I expressed some thither originally on speculation and I got immediate replies praising their quality and asking for more. The violets must be picked always in the afternoon, because otherwise they lose their perfume. Then they must be brought into town in the evening for shipment.

"My greatest success is with sweet pease, which most people do not get along very well with in this latitude. I get the very finest possible seed to begin with. From June to August I pick very nearly 4,000 sweet pea blossoms daily, and they sell for fifty cents a hundred, so that they are really the most profitable of my flowers. They require but little care. I plant the seeds in the spring in open ground, about four inches deep, and as the plants grow the earth is kept hilled up around them. Then posts are stuck in along the rows with strings arranged so that the vines are trained upon them. I had one-sixteenth of an acre set out with sweet pease, and it brought in a clear $200 from the sale of the blooms.

GROWING DAHLIAS.

"Another flower I am very successful with is the single dahlia, which is very much handsomer than the double dahlia, you know. I plant the bulbs, which I propagate myself, the last of May, and the plants begin to flower about the last of August, keeping on until frost. I manage to keep them going for some time later than would otherwise be possible by lighting fires on cold nights at the ends of the rows. In this way I get them over the first frosty spell, after which there is usually a season of quite warm weather, so that frequently my dahlias are blooming beautifully up to the end of November.

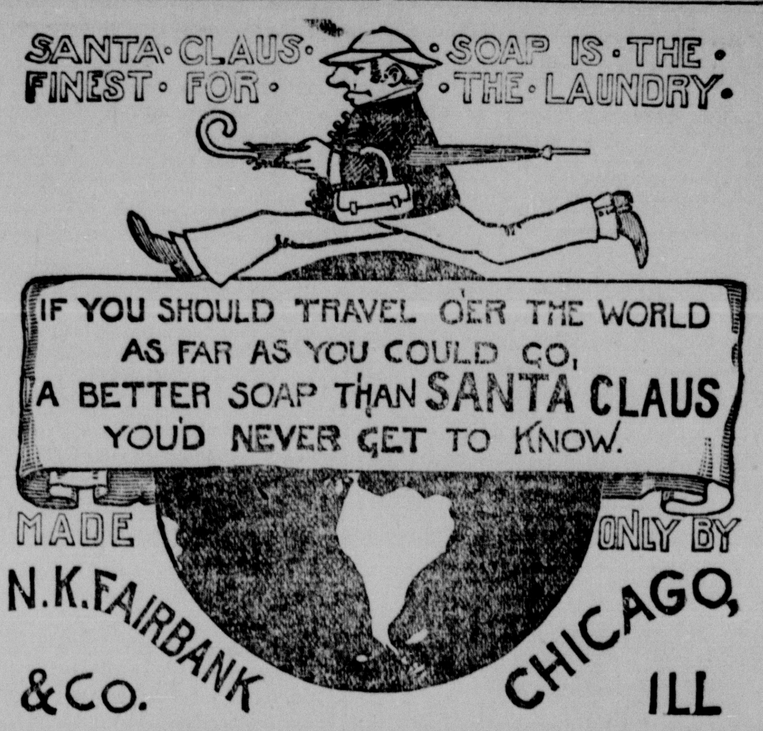

I try to make the flowers I grow alternate, so that when one sort stops blooming another begins. My violets are flowering from the last of September to the end of April; then come the roses through the summer, and the sweet pease, with dahlias in the fall and violets again until spring. You can perceive that my way of growing flowers does not make necessary any large investment in greenhouses or otherwise. Of course there are some expenses. I have two men to help me, though one of them I should have to keep anyway for other purposes. There is a great deal in the proper packing of flowers for market.

"For example, violets must be placed in bunches in pasteboard boxes, with waxed paper folded loosely around them. They must not be touched with water, because to do so will take away their sweetness. I consider my own flower growing enterprise as only begun thus far; some day I hope to become a millionaire by selling violets and sweet pease. At all events there is money in the business, properly pursued, and more women ought to go into it."—Washington Star.

Can This Be So?

"Nothing wearies a railroad traveler more than a straight track," says an old railroad man. "Any road with fifty miles of straight track would be shunned for one with three or four curves in that distance. I know legions of people who put themselves out to go by roads which wind and curve and give a new bit of scenery every few minutes."—Detroit Free Press.

It is a fact not generally known that Missouri furnishes better cavalry horses than any other state in the Union. The Missouri horse is sturdy and short backed, and is now much in demand by cavalry officers.

GREAT DEVELOPMENTS!

Everything is pointing to an early activity about

The Stickney Track

in the spring, and Chicago Lawn Lots are bound to go up.

READ WHAT THE PAPERS SAY ABOUT IT!

"It is safe to state that no Suburb of Chicago has had as much building going on according to its size as Chicago Lawn."

"The improvements are steadily becoming of a higher character. In the first place no suburb presents less of the one-story cottage element than does Chicago Lawn. The houses are two-story, of attractive design, nicely finished and are being built with stone foundations."

We are nearer the city than are these improvements and can offer extra inducements to investors. Buy now and make money.

Kept up for years—the offer that's made by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It's addressed to you, if you have Catarrh. It's a reward of $500, if they can't cure you, no matter how bad your case, or of how long standing—an offer that's made in good faith by responsible men.

Think what it means! Absolute confidence in their Remedy, or they couldn't afford to take the risk. A long record of perfect and permanent cures of the worst cases—or they couldn't have faith in it. It means no more catarrh—or $500. If you fail to be cured, you won't fail to be paid.

But perhaps you won't believe it. Then there's another reason for trying it. Show that you can't be cured, and you'll get $500. It's a plain business offer. The makers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will pay you that amount if they can't cure you. They know that they can—you think that they can't. If they're wrong, you get the cash. If you're wrong, you're rid of catarrh.

light questions will come in later on and throw light upon all the complications of high taxes and home-made sidewalks. It is only necessary for the voter to keep his seat and wait for the smiling candidate to suggest more "smiles." If you know how to take it there is much in a little city election.

No, we cannot tell you just who will be candidates. We are not mind readers. The ills that befall the ambitious citizens just before a municipal contest cannot be cured by any treatment in the practice of Christian Science as yet developed. A man cannot sit down quietly and think that he is a candidate, and then walk into the street to find the people congratulating him on his success. Not much. To become a candidate for a place in the city council a man must first know that he has got the fever; and it is a very easy thing to have it in a malignant form unless he is innoculated in time. The disease is very prevalent at this time and quite catching; though really considered sporadic in its nature. When the fever is fairly on then comes the medicine to be taken; and taken straight, without sugar and in the presence of the boys, though it may be behind the screens. When this stage of the fever has set in it is too late to join the reformers or expect aid from any third party movement.

No, we must confess that we do not know much about local political matters, as now developed. We only know that in the coming few days "Truth will be crushed to earth" frequently and will rise again; at least when the election is over —THE TELEGRAPH is asked the question: "Don't you believe that the Mc Kinley bill increased the price on imported cigars?"

Our answer is "Yes." Imported articles on which the McKinley bill increased the tariff are very likely at first to increase in price; especially if the same in quality is not manufactured in this country. The free trade advocates claim that articles of domestic manufacture have also increased in price, but that is an error. Imported cigars, laces and wines, such as are not made in this country may have increased in price on account of an increase in tariff rates, but the gentlemen and ladies who indulge in such luxuries can well afford to pay the additional tax, or whatever it might be called. The McKinley bill has not increased the price of potatoes, the crop failure did that, nor the price of clothing, wheat, meat, plows, wagons, corn or any of the necessaries of the laboring man. It is a trick, a humbug, for the free trader to insist that prices of domestic products, from which the wants of the great majority of our people are exclusively supplied, have greatly advanced. To show that the price of Havanna cigars and such useless luxuries has advanced is merely a clever attempt to deceive the unthinking and to dodge the real truth.

—We clip the following from the Sterling Gazette:

"Mr. Parsons, as representative of the Dixon Business Men's Association, was at the meeting of the Rock Falls Paper Co. on yesterday, and stated that that city would be pleased to enter into negotiations, whereby they might secure that plant either on a cash or stock basis. The company have the matter under advisement."

—This is only one of the frequent inconsistencies we see in the free trade papers. The Atlanta Constitution says:

"The McKinley law has fixed it so that trusts can flourish in any kind of weather."

While half an inch away we find in the same paper:

"The Western farmers are much delighted over the prospective reduction in prices of agricultural machinery, resulting from the dissolution of the American Harvester Trust."

—Away out in Iowa editors are joking about the Astor-Willing marriage, just because the presents amounted to over a million dollars, and the bride was Willing to share the millionair's lots. The Corning (Iowa) Union, explains it thus:

"This wedding probably occured because Jack Astor,—and she was Willing, and she raked in the biggest Jack pot on record."

—From Dr. H. E. Paine we receive late Providence, Rhode Island, papers from which we clip the following obituary of W. T. Tibbitts, son in-law to Mr. and Mrs G. L. Schuler, of this city:

Mr. William T. Tibbitts, whose death occurred somewhat suddenly yesterday morning, had been since his early manhood identified with the bookselling trade of this city, and by his wide knowledge of literature, his uniform courtesy and kindliness, no less than his integrity and independence of character, has won the respect and esteem of his large clientage and the business community Mr. Tibbitt's literary tastes were not confined to his business, and in his intervals of leisure he had prepared several interesting and valuable articles for the Sunday Journal on subjects of bibliography and literary history, the last one entitled "Blunders" attracting considerable attention throughout the country and bringing a large correspondence in the way of inquiry and suggestion of additional facts.

How To Break Up a Severe Cold.

From the Virgina City, Mont. Madisonian.

When we find a medicine we know to possess genuine merit, we consider it a duty, and we take pleasure in telling the public what it is. Such a medicine we found Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. By the use of this syrup we have relieved, in a few hours, severe colds, and in the course of two or three days, entirely broke them up as has several of our friends to whom we have recommended it. It is all it is represented to be by the manufacturers. If you have a cough and want to stop it, Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will do the work. For sale by H. E. Donaldson.

I have a cousin who is a printer, says Ex Mayor J. B. Loughran of North Des Moines, Ia. Some years ago he was employed in this city where they were printing circulars for Chamberlain. He had a deep seated cold and terrible cough, and while setting up copy he made up his mind to buy a bottle. It cured him and that was the first I ever knew of Chamberlain's Cough remedy. I have been strongly in its favor ever since. My own experience and that of my family convinces me that this remedy is the best in the world. That is strong language but that is what I think.
